IMAGINED IMMIGRATION

'Imagined Immigration' is a growing collection of large scale woven posters that explores the tension between British public perception of immigration and concrete immigration data. It focuses on the media's impact on the public discourse. The posters illustrate the process of information making and reveal its flaws and biased nature. By weaving concrete data into warped assumptions, the viewer can take a closer look at how these assumptions are crafted.

The work was developed using data from The Migration Observatory in Oxford. It will be exhibited in The Migration Museum London later this year, accompanied by a workshop I am currently developing.

CONCORDE REPEAT

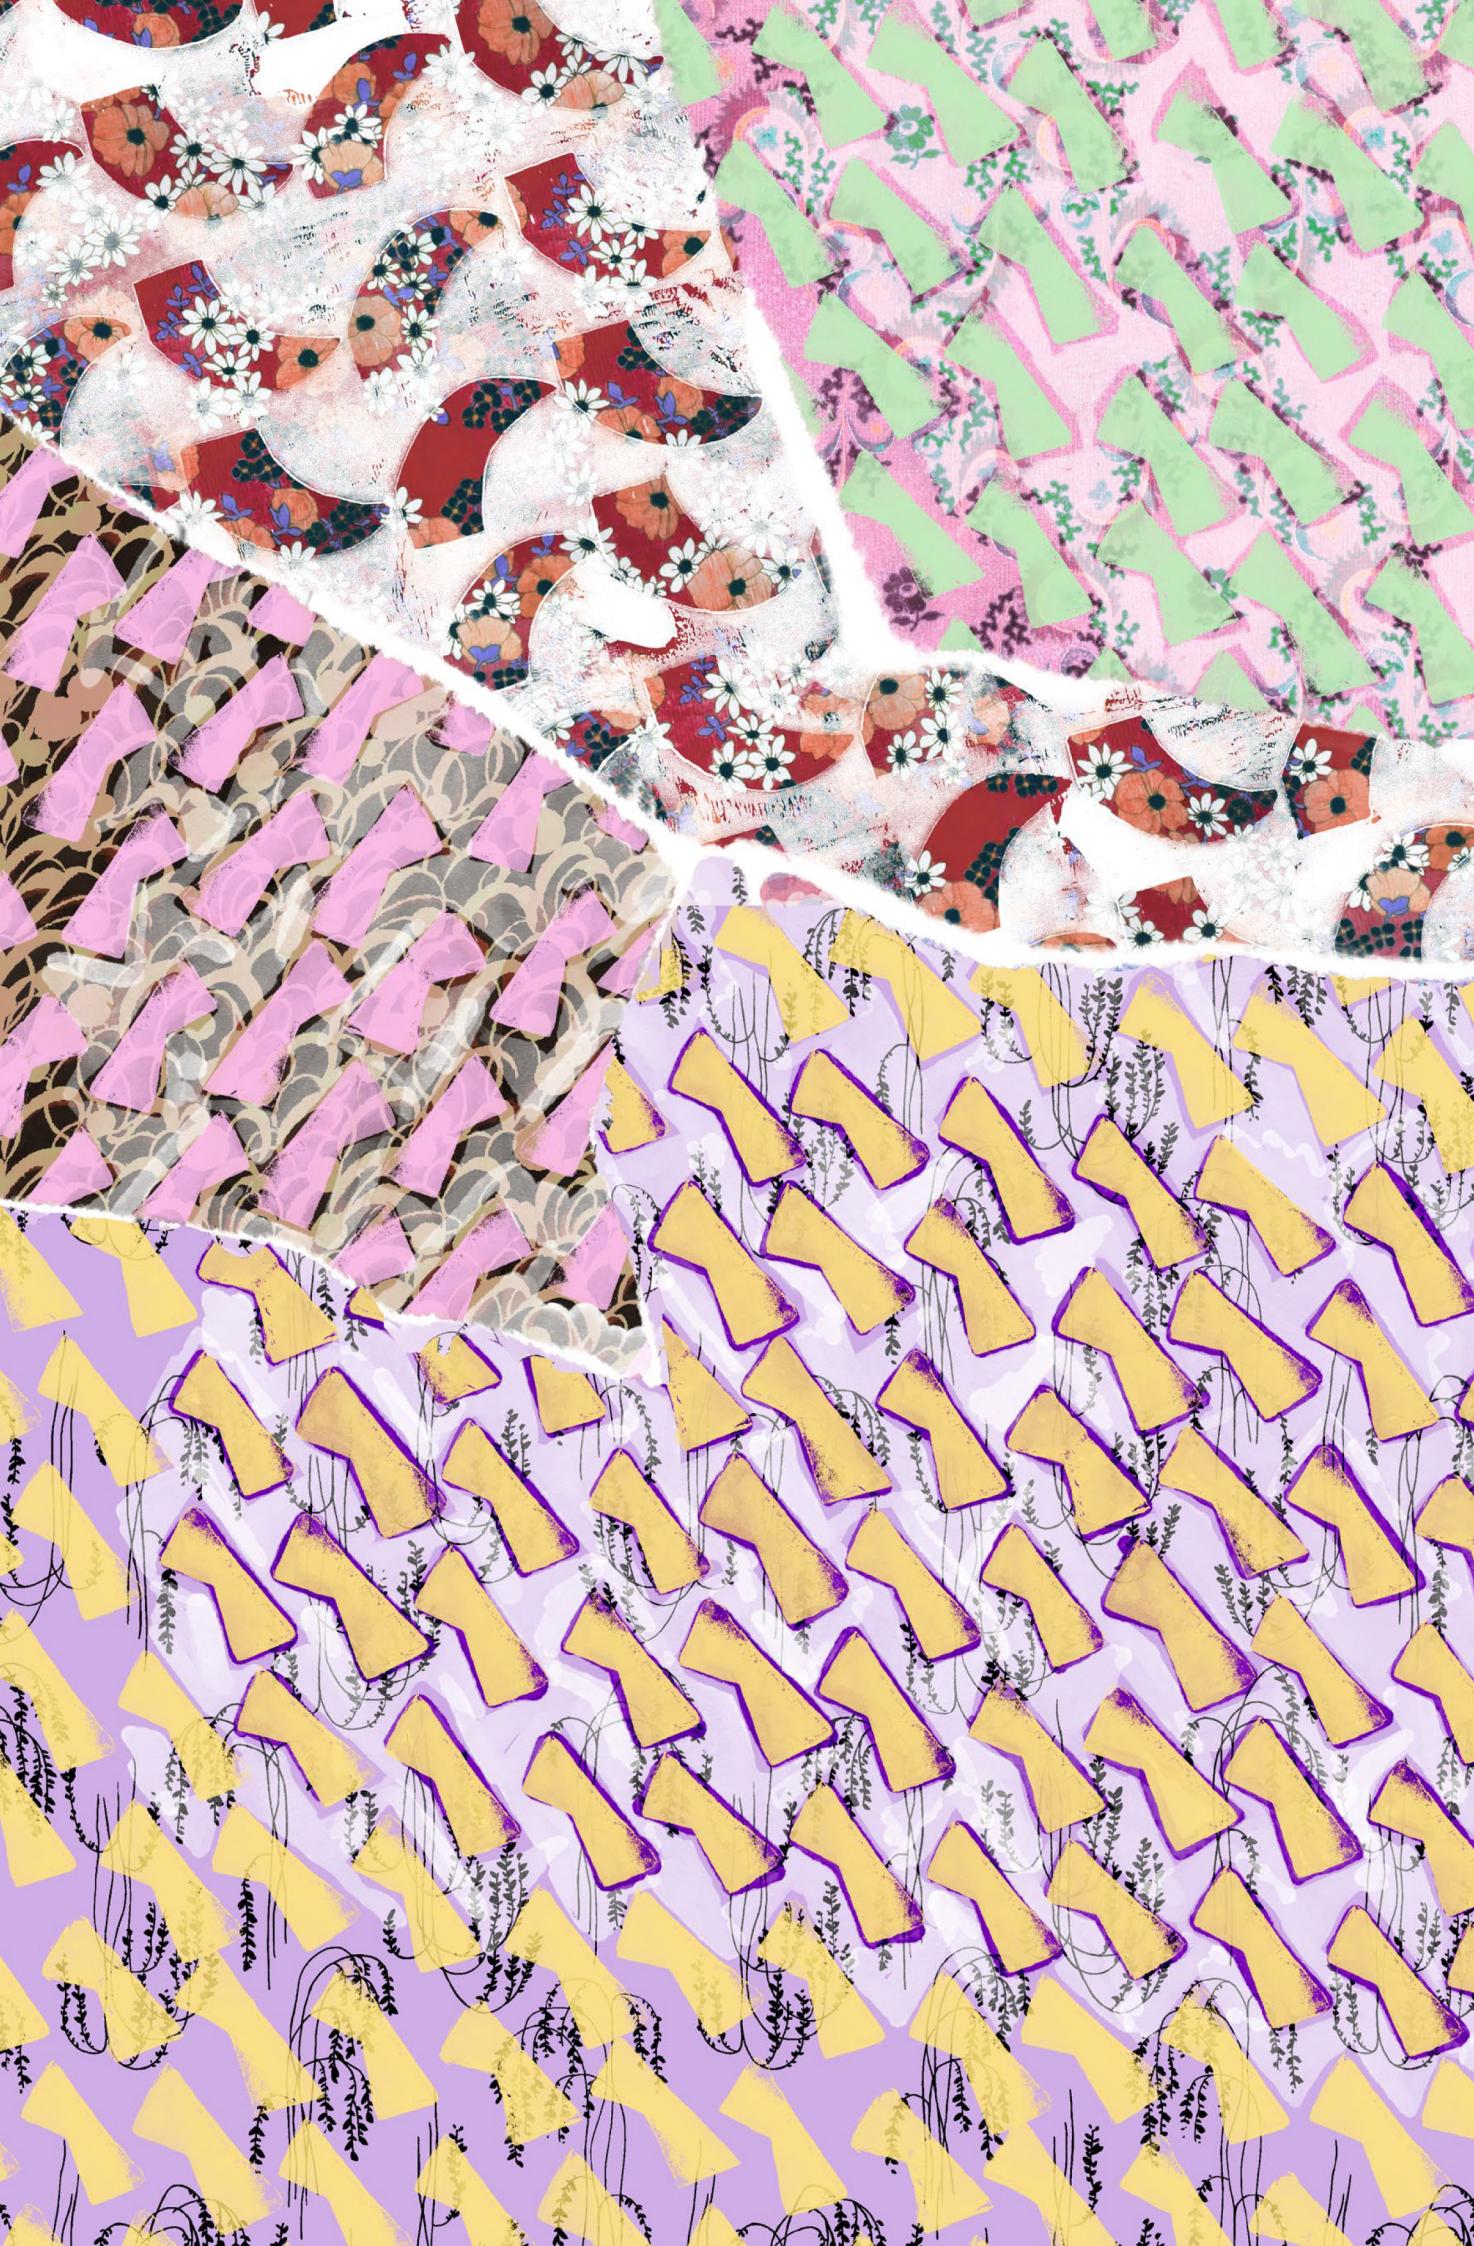

LINO BLOCK PRINT

This print story has two layers. The top layer is a geometric lino print and the bottom layer is a floral micro print.

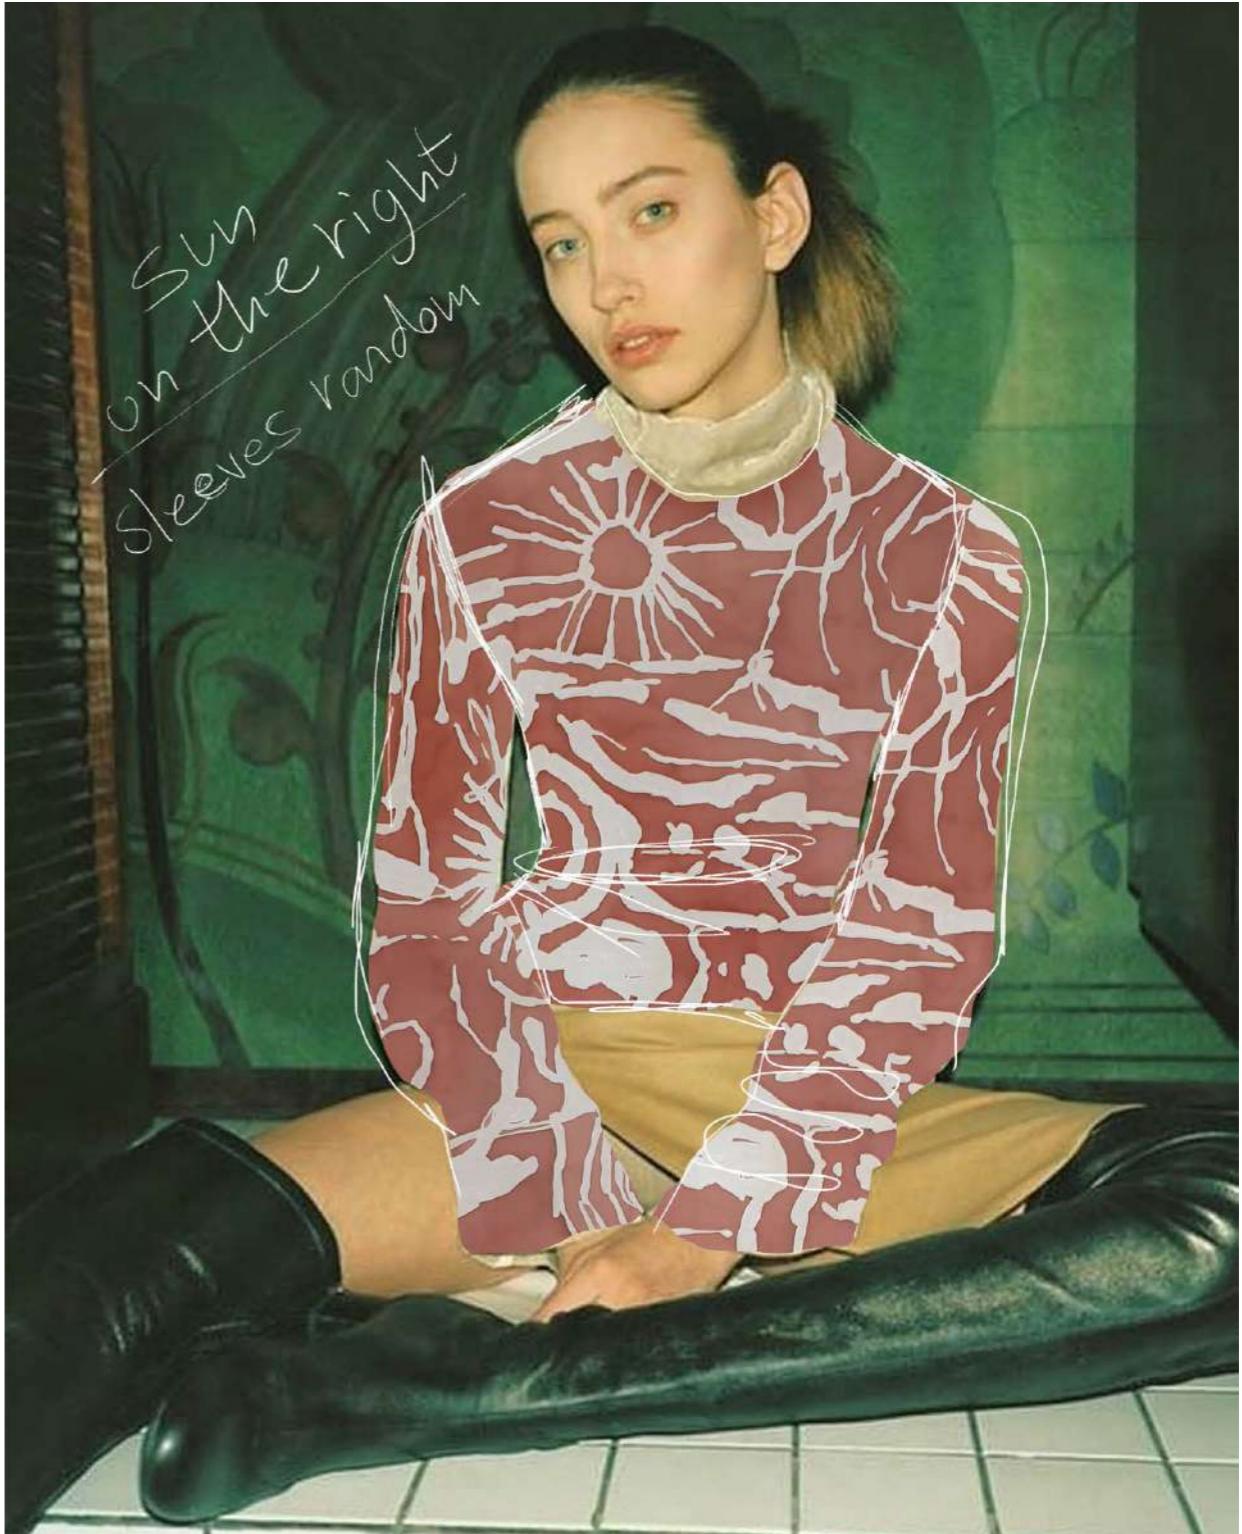

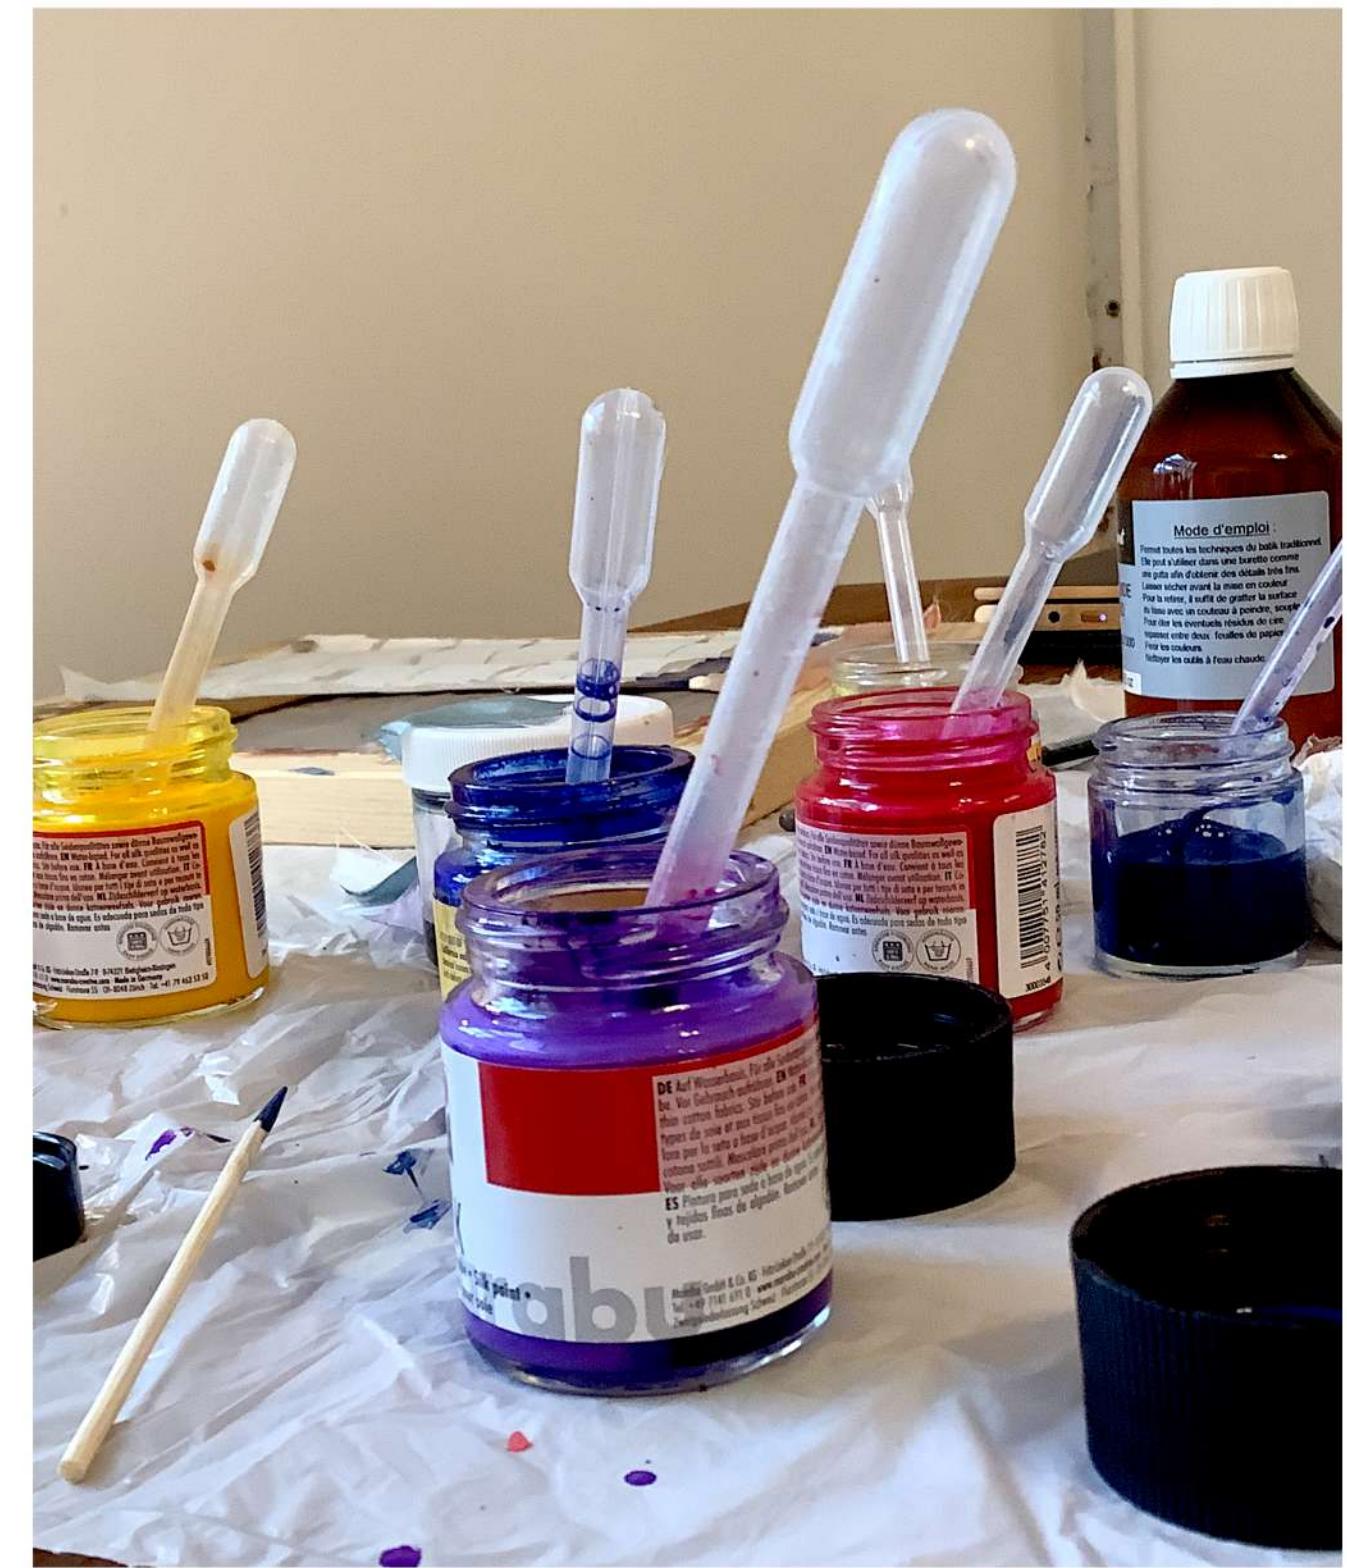

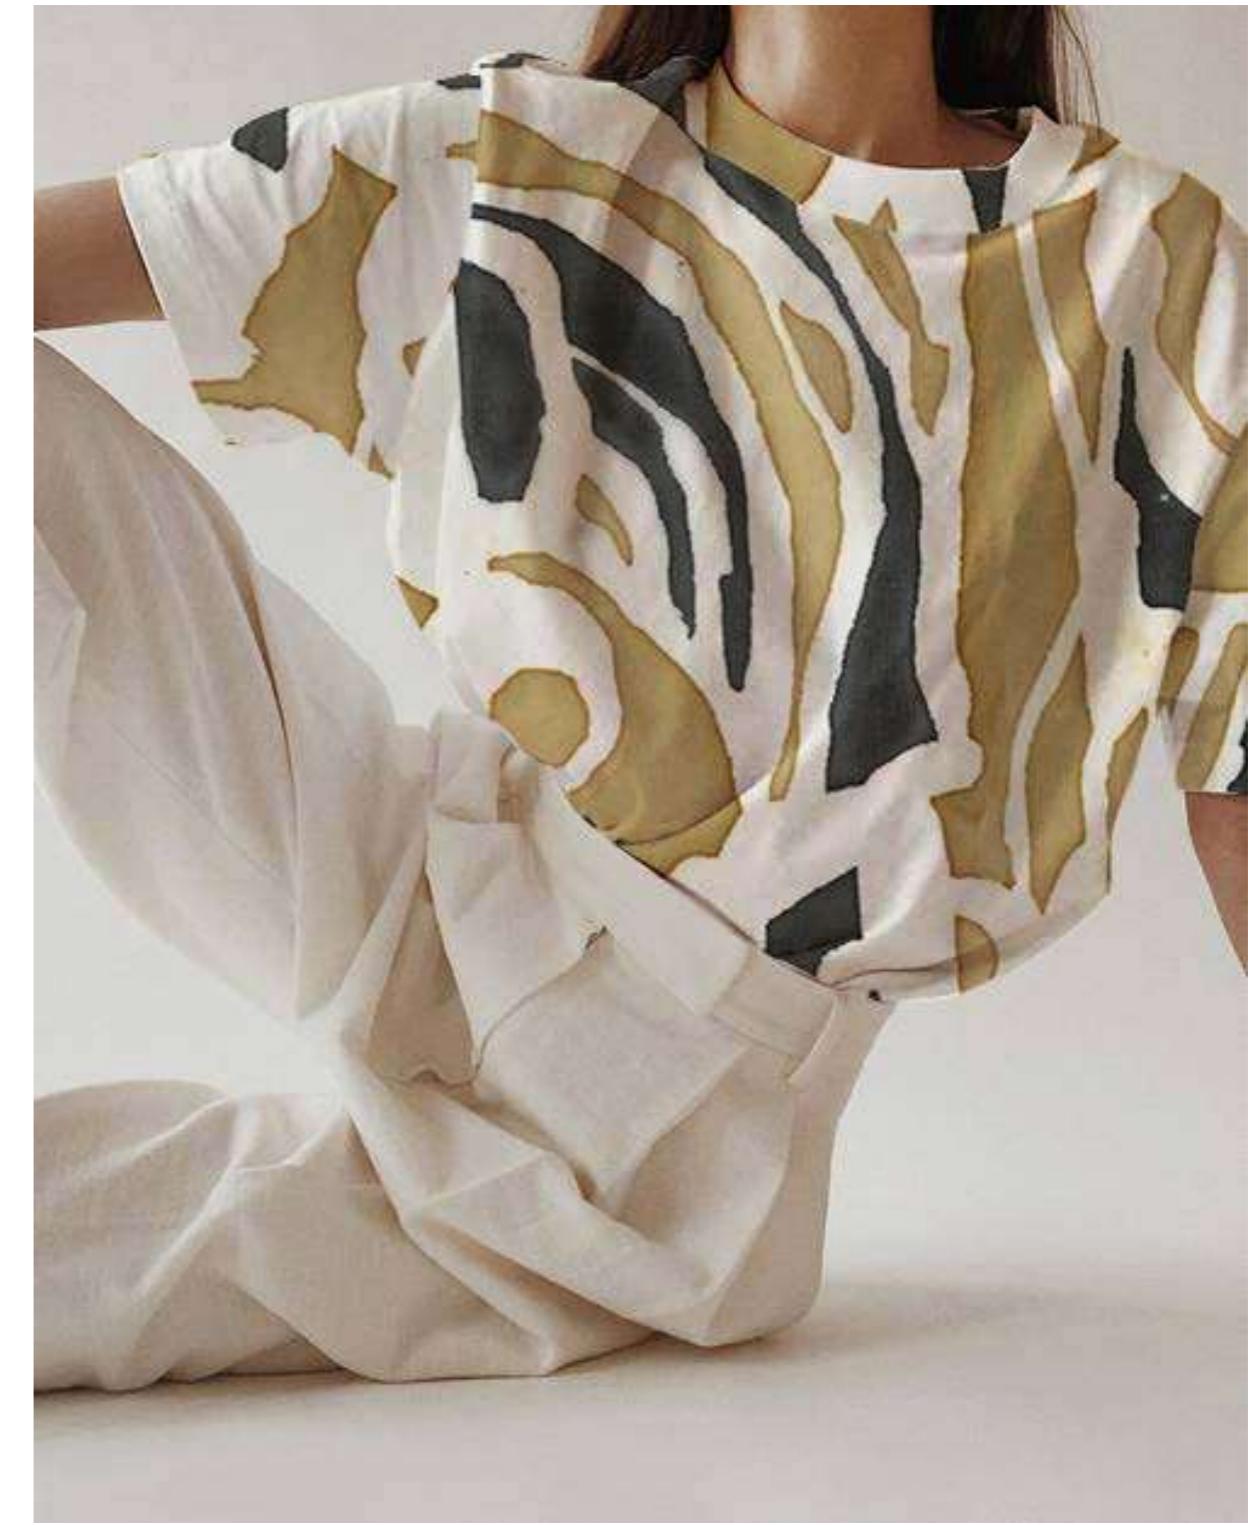

HAND PAINTED BATIK

Drawn with cold wax on Habotai silk and coloured by hand. These artworks were drawn to form a repeat, then scanned and edited into a perfect repeat tile using Photoshop to allow scaling and digital printing in production.
